Sheriff Unable To Learn How Sunday Night Accident Occurred

A 16 month old baby was killed and five persons were injured at 11 p. m. Sunday in a head-on auto crash on the Walnut creek pike, six miles north of Circleville.

The baby, first traffic victim of 1939 in Pickaway county, was Gloria Aldenderfer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Aldenderfer, Ashville Route 2. A broken neck caused death.

Mr. and Mrs. Aldenderfer and their son, Leroy, 3, are in Berger hospital suffering from injuries received in the collision. Mr. Aldenderfer, 23, driver of one car, suffered a brain concussion, broken jaw, cuts and bruises. Mrs. Bernice Aldenderfer, 22, has a fractured right leg, fractured ribs and cuts and bruises. Leroy was kept in the hospital for observation. He was severely bruised.

Miss Bates was cut and bruised.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff said he was unable to determine the cause of the crash, which occurred on a straight stretch of highway. The cars were badly wrecked. Passing motorists took the injured to the hospital and to Ashville.

Dr. E. L. Montgomery, who treated the Aldenderfers, said the baby was dead when taken to the hospital. The body was removed to the funeral home of Crites & Van Cleave, Stoutsville. No arrangements for services have been made.

STEEL INDUSTRY REGAINING PEAK AFTER BRIEF LULL

CLEVELAND, Jan. 9.—(INS)—Demand and production in the steel industry have climbed back from the holiday lull almost to the pre-Christmas level, the operations rate reaching 51.5 percent last week, the magazine Steel reported today.

Steel predicted that there would be still further gains with fairly large tonnages scheduled for January shipment and backlogs increased by recent orders for automotive steel, involving bars, tubing and flat-rolled material.

The activities of congress, particularly in regard to proposed railroad legislation and armament appropriations, are being watched carefully by the industry, Steel said.

Automobile production, with an output of 76,655 units last week was approximately 50 percent above last year.

Total pig iron production for 1938 was 18,889,663 tons, 48.6 percent below the 36,109,139 tons in 1937, in spite of recovery during the last half. The total number of blast furnaces active Dec. 31 was 115, six less than in the preceding month, but 22 more than a year ago.

SENATE TO ASK HOPKINS TO APPEAR FOR HEARING

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—(INS)—Public hearings on President Roosevelt's nomination of Harry L. Hopkins as secretary of commerce were expected to be ordered by the senate commerce committee when it meets this afternoon to decide procedure on his appointment.

That Hopkins will be invited appear before the committee was believed certain by committee members.

Mt. Vernon Sheriff Clubbed By Middletown Man; Two Fail To Escape

MT. VERNON, Jan. 9.—(INS)—Aided by state highway patrolmen, Knox county authorities today blockaded all roads in the vicinity in a search for John A. Manning, 36, Middletown, who escaped from the county jail after clubbing Sheriff Clyde Biggs.

Two other prisoners who tried to escape with Manning were subdued and taken back to their cells. Manning and his fellow prisoners rushed Biggs when he opened the door to the jail bull pen to admit visitors.

After Manning hit him, the sheriff regained his senses quick enough to fire a wild shot in the direction of the fleeing prisoners. Ten highway patrol cars immediately were pressed into use but reported no early success in their search for Manning.

Manning was serving a term for forgery and was also being questioned in connection with two robberies in Mt. Vernon.

WITNESSES TAKE STAND FOR ROBY IN JOB CONTEST

Opening statements in the hearing of the suit of Ralph Roby, Memorial hall junior, against the trustees of the Soldiers' Monumental association were interrupted Monday for three witnesses to testify so they could attend the governor's inauguration program in Columbus.

Those who testified were Mrs. Clark Will, T. A. Renick and Mrs. Helen Black Anderson. Ten witnesses were called in by the plaintiff to testify as to the manner in which he performed his work at Memorial hall. Those called in addition to the above three are Miss Mary Wilder, Mrs. Lucy G. Price, Miss Agnes Butch, Mrs. Hulse Hays, Mrs. L. E. Miller, Mrs. Clark Hunsicker and William Reid. No witnesses have been called by the defendants.

Roby obtained an injunction last May in Common Pleas court to retain his position. His petition explained that he was employed on Oct. 1, 1916 under an ordinance of council. The action said that on last May 19 he received a letter from Ralph Ward, president of the board of trustees, stating that his services would not be needed after June 1.

Roby contends that the board has no authority over city employee. The case is being presented to Judge Meeker Terwilliger.

ADELPHIAN INDICTED FOR FORGERY OF $11.50 CHECK

Clyde Merlon Lama, 28, of Adelphi, was placed in the county jail Saturday after his arrest on an indictment alleging forgery. Officers said the secret indictment was jointly against Lama and Weldon Cox, also of Adelphi, previously arrested.

The check involved was for $11.50. It was issued Oct. 19, 1938. The check was on the Salt Creek Valley bank. It was signed with the name of Gim Seymore.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—(INS)—Fireworks over national defense, neutrality, the Wagner Labor Relations act, W. P. A. and presidential appointments will feature this week's sessions of congress. As President Roosevelt called the congressional leaders to a White House conference this morning the following action was scheduled:

1. In both senate and house the long-awaited American Federation of Labor amendments to the labor act, designed to give that organization a better break before the N. L. R. B. will be filed.

2. The senate foreign relations committee will meet Wednesday to agree on procedure over a batch of bills to make the neutrality act more mandatory on the President.

3. While the house is whisking through the emergency W. P. 4. The senate commerce committee meets this afternoon to consider President Roosevelt's appointment of former W. P. A. Administrator Harry L. Hopkins as secretary of commerce. UNION COUNTIANS DECLARE CLERK TOOK OWN LIFE

MARYSVILLE, Jan. 9.—(INS)—Union county officials completed an intensive investigation today into the death of Clark S. Hayes, 28 year old grocery clerk who disappeared on his wedding eve and the verdict was that he killed himself because of a physical deformity.

The verdict climaxed one of the strangest cases of self destruction in this history of central Ohio. When the formal announcement was made by Prosecutor William J. Porter nearly 500 curious citizens were waiting in the courthouse yard.

Hayes' body was recovered from an ice-crusted stone quarry Thursday after he disappeared Tuesday afternoon on the eve of his wedding to Oletha Morrow, 26, a fellow clerk in the grocery store.

Porter said that detectives found a roll of copper wire, similar to that with which Hayes' body was bound to a stone-filled milk can in a garage adjoining the grocery store and that the severed ends matched the wire with which he had been bound.

The official verdict said Hayes had put off his marriage several times because of his physical deformity and that he had decided to kill himself rather than go through with the ceremony. Porter said was the official opinion of officers that Hayes hoped his body would not be found.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 9.—(INS)—Two murderous madmen remaining at large out of the band of five who escaped in Ohio on New Year's day were hunted by state and local police throughout eastern Nebraska and neighboring states today.

The two fugitives are Frank Haines, 36, a former Chicago bandit and leader in the escape plot from the hospital for criminally insane at Lima, O., and William Blatz, 32, a Maine.

They broke away after injuring a national guard captain and his wife who surprised them Saturday night in an attempt to raid the militia armory for guns and ammunition.

Highlights from Bricker's Address

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9.—(INS)—Highlights of the inaugural address of Gov. John W. Bricker follow:

"It is our desire to call to the service of the government of Ohio the very ablest men and women we can possibly get. With their help there is no problem of government that is too serious to solve."

"Two immediate steps in the revitalization of government are imperative. The first is to reduce the cost of government. The second is the establishment of common honesty in the affairs of government."

Initial Message To Solons To Include Recommendations For Many Changes; Senator Robert Taft In Audience

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9.—(INS)—Lashing out at centralization of authority in Washington, "accompanied as it has been by reckless public spending," Ohio's new Republican governor, John W. Bricker, declared today in his inaugural address that there must be a revitalization of state and local governments throughout the nation.

Two immediate steps in this program are imperative, he said, listing them as:

- 1.—Reduce the cost of government, and,
- 2.—Establish common honesty in the affairs of government.

Only a few hours before Bricker repeated the oath of office after Chief Justice Carl V. Weygant of the state supreme court, it was announced that his finances, director had slashed $3,000,000 off from the temporary general appropriations bill prepared by aides of former Governor Martin L. Davey, a Democrat.

"It is easy to spend money and to expand government," Mr. Bricker observed. "It is difficult to save and retrench."

Ancient Bible Used

Ohio's fifty-fourth governor—the first Republican in eight years—used in the inaugural ceremony a Bible which has been in the Bricker family for almost 100 years. It was brought here by his years. It was brought here by his aged mother, Mrs. Laura King Bricker, from her home in Mt. Sterling.

She also chose the Scriptural passage to which the Bible was opened as her 45 year old son placed his left hand on it, raised his right hand and swore to defend the Constitution and administer the executive office to the best of his ability.

It was the sixth chapter and eighth verse of Micah in the Old Testament:

"He hath showed thee, O man, What is good; and what Doth the Lord require of thee, But to do justly, and To Love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

Present at the inaugural was Ohio's new Republican U. S. senator, Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati, who with Bricker headed the G. O. P. ticket elected overwhelmingly last Nov. 8. Taft planned to return to Washington soon after the ceremony.

Specific recommendations for the major changes he proposes for the state government were left for his initial message to the legislature which he was to deliver in person Wednesday night. The inaugural address was restricted to a general statement of policy.

Condemning Fascism and Communism and observing that "we have had the backwash" of the old world trend toward reactionary forms of government, Mr. Bricker asserted that the American people

HUNGARY SPEEDS MORE SOLDIERS TO BORDER AREA

BUDAPEST, Jan. 9.—(INS)—The Hungarian government today rushed reinforcements to military posts and establishments on the frontier with Czechoslovakia as a result of a new border clash in the neighborhood of Nagygejoc in which a Czech regular army officer was reported wounded as he entered Hungarian territory.

The dispatch of additional troops, described in Budapest today as a defensive measure, was ordered as a mixed Czech-Hungarian commission hastened to investigate the most recent outbreak of violence on the frontier between Hungary's new territory and dismembered Czechoslovakia.

The new crisis developed as the time limit expired for a Czechoslovak reply to an official Hungarian demand for an apology for last week's serious clash at Munkacs.

ROBBERY SUSPECT GRILLED
CHILLICOTHE, Jan. 9.—(INS)—Police were to question Leonard E. Renkel, 26, concerning several robberies following his confession today that he broke into the Royal theatre and stole a flashlight battery.

"We must not only honestly administer the affairs of government, but we must convince the people of Ohio that their government is honest, in order that public confidence in government may be returned."

"I call on the businessmen of Ohio to cooperate in this effort. The problem is theirs as well as ours. Every citizen owes to his government the same obligations a public official owes."

"Honest and economical spending are purchaseable; when the

Specific recommendations for the major changes he proposes for the state government were left for his initial message to the legislature which he was to deliver in person Wednesday night. The inaugural address was restricted to a general statement of policy.

Condemning Fascism and Communism and observing that "we have had the backwash" of the old world trend toward reactionary forms of government, Mr. Bricker asserted that the American people must be saved.

"The school foundation fund presents approximately a 17 million dollar deficit. The general revenues of the state are in a very uncertain and unsatisfactory condition. To meet the necessary functions of government, money must be saved."

"When the privileges of government are purchasable; when the state's business can be bought for a price, the institutions of free government are imperiled."

"We must not only honestly administer the affairs of government, but we must convince the people of Ohio that their government is honest, in order that public confidence in government may be renewed."

"I call on the businessmen of Ohio to cooperate in this effort. The problem is theirs as well as ours. Every citizen owes to his government the same obligations a public official owes."

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9—(INS)—Highlights of the inaugural address of Gov. John W. Bricker follow:

"It is our desire to call to the service of the government of Ohio the very ablest men and women we can possibly get. With their help there is no problem of government that is too serious to solve."

"Two immediate steps in the revitalization of government are imperative. The first is to reduce the cost of government. The second is the establishment of common honesty in the affairs of government."

ple "spoke" in such terms (at the last election) that we are now convinced that the two-party system of government is secure in this country."

To Encourage Business

"Here in America," he said, "we are determined again to encourage business, rather than to hinder it; to preserve opportunity and to recognize the proper place of the individual in his government."

"No superman or dictator can point the way to the better life we seek. It is a democratic task. The leadership must be of the many, of people of high character and good purpose. Such leadership is undramatic but safe. By it Democracies serve and build."

"Even in this country we have seen a marked tendency toward centralization of political power. That outreach of power, that centralization of authority, influenced the American people in the recent campaign."

"The election of last November indicated a trend -- nationwide in scope -- away from undue centralization of power in Washington, accompanied as it has been by reckless spending."

Mr. Bricker declared that the federal government should exercise the paramount power in its proper sphere, but that representative government must be founded on the interests of the local communities.

State Sovereignty Urged

"The sovereignty of states," said the governor, "is but an expression of that local interest. With all ability, we shall defend against the abuse of federal power, when it means destruction of local self-government within its proper sphere. That is the foundation of our representative system."

Then Mr. Bricker called for revitalization of state and local governments, not only in Ohio but throughout the nation. The individual citizen, he said, must again become conscious of his responsibility to the government and alert to the preservation of his rights.

"That cannot be done by taking government further away but by keeping it at home," he emphasized.

Turning next to the mass of new laws enacted both by Congress and legislatures, Mr. Bricker charged that administration of these laws had failed miserably in many instances, that after the first glamor had faded there was a loss of interest.

The nation, he said, is striving desperately to adjust itself to changing social and industrial problems of the age. Representative government will be maintained, he added, if that adjustment can be made.

As an indispensable aid in the proper administration of laws necessitated by these changes,

Bricker strongly urged that men and women who dedicate their lives to that field of work be enlisted in the service of the government.

"It is our desire," he said, "to call to the service of the government of Ohio the very ablest men and women we can possibly get. With their help there is no problem of government that is too serious to solve. Without their help, public distrust in the institutions of government will continue to increase."

Cost Reduction Paramount

Here Mr. Bricker reiterated his plea for reduction in the cost of government, pledging himself and the Republican party to an economical administration.

"With a strong and inspired leadership," said the governor, "the Ohio legislature has already determined on such a course. There will be a complete cooperation of all departments of government to bring about this desired end."

Conceding that many of the new functions of government are desirable, Bricker said nevertheless "we must face frankly the fact that for every service the government renders, someone must work to pay the cost." For every dollar collected in taxes, he said, there is a dollar less of industry and private employment, adding that waste and unnecessary expenditures must be eliminated.

Bricker foresaw a huge savings by the application of business principles to the conduct of state government. Economy is mandatory, he said, because he is faced at the outset with a deficit approximating 20 million dollars.

"The school foundation funds presents approximately a 17 million dollar deficit," he stated. "The general revenue of the state are in a very uncertain and unsatisfactory condition. To meet the necessary functions of government, money must be saved."

Sensing a lack of public confidence in the state government, the governor said public affairs must not only be administered honestly, but it is the duty of the incoming administration to convince the people that their government is honest in order to restore faith.

Businessmen of Ohio were called on to cooperate in this effort, the governor asserting that every citizen owes to his government the same obligation a public official owes.

"Honest and economical spending of government money," he declared, "will give our government new life and strength."

He reaffirmed the conviction that high standards of universal education must be maintained throughout the state and that Ohio, in cooperation with the federal government, must continue to care for the needy.

Bricker promised to bring forth

Brucks swung at Maj. Miltonberger's legs with a crowbar, but missed and the officer knocked him unconscious with a blow to the jaw. Haines sped outside and disappeared with Blatz who had been acting as a lookout.

Brucks confirmed the story of Frank Nuckels, another member of the gang captured in Cleveland, that Haines had intended wrecking vengeance on his former wife and four Chicago policemen he blamed with putting him behind bars.

He said they had abandoned the plan for the time being because they found Mrs. Haines' house strongly guarded by police.

Marion Pierce, a Negro, and the fifth in the band, separated from the rest in Fort Wayne, Ind. according to Brucks.

Mr. Bricker declared that the federal government should exercise the paramount power in its proper sphere, but that representative government must be founded on the interests of the local communities.

"The sovereignty of states," said the governor, "is but an expression of that local interest. With all ability, we shall defend against the abuse of federal power, when it means destruction of local self-government within its proper sphere. That is the foundation of our representative system."

Cost Reduction Paramount

Here Mr. Bricker reiterated his plea for reduction in the cost of government, pledging himself and the Republican party to an economical administration.

Sensing a lack of public confidence in the state government, the governor said public affairs must not only be administered honestly, but it is the duty of the incoming administration to convince the people that their government is honest in order to restore faith.

Businessmen of Ohio were called on to cooperate in this effort, the governor asserting that every citizen owes to his government the same obligation a public official owes.

with a rush. Haines felled the captain with a blackjack stolen in a robbery the night before in Council Bluffs, Ia. and slashed his leg with a knife. Then he picked up Mrs. Kelso and dashed her to the floor.

Brucks swung at Maj. Miltonberger's legs with a crowbar, but missed and the officer knocked him unconscious with a blow to the jaw. Haines sped outside and disappeared with Blatz who had been acting as a lookout.

Brucks confirmed the story of Frank Nuckels, another member of the gang captured in Cleveland, that Haines had intended wrecking vengeance on his former wife and four Chicago policemen he blamed with putting him behind bars.

He said they had abandoned the plan for the time being because they found Mrs. Haines' house strongly guarded by police.

Marion Pierce, a Negro, and the fifth in the band, separated from the rest in Fort Wayne, Ind. according to Brucks.

THE WORLD WE DEAL WITH

"WE know that in much of the world trust in any form of agreement has completely vanished," says Cordell Hull, Secretary of State. We know that might has stated it would have its way, and that it would recognize no equal except equal might. Such is the world we may have to deal with."

The fact is only too apparent. It shouts at us from Germany, Italy, Japan and Spain. It is a world dominated by force. In spite of our religion, morality and science, we are back to the rule of the Middle Ages, "the simple plan that they may take who have the power, and they may keep who can."

Nations that have higher ideals must strive to preserve them, in the faith that righteousness, peace and good will are normal facts, merely obscured for the present, and will yet prevail. But in the meantime such nations are obliged to arm and be ready to defend themselves, lest ruthless power set us all back for ages, as it has sometimes done before in human history.

And do we thereby put ourselves on the same level as the militarist nations? We do not think we do. We have no joy in war and no faith in force, as the militarists have. We try to keep our ideals and our sanity, deploring the need and waste of armament, and ready to push ahead in things worth while whenever the war-clouds lift.

VIGOROUS SPORT

SKIING has changed from a limited sphere and small following to a popular pastime. In the United States it has created new business and boosted other business long established. Hotels and railroads that used to close down or greatly curtail their services in the winter months now do their biggest trade then as they cater to throngs of skiers.

There are schools for beginners, where they are taught to balance and develop the muscles needed for this lively sport. The manufacture of skis and sticks is a thriving industry in itself. So, too, is the production of all the fancy ski togs now stylish for winter use even by non-skiers.

America invented indoor skiing, to the great benefit of backers, electrical firms, and others, but London has improved the idea with a great ski palace where international experts perform before delighted spectators.

Pleasantly enough, costs have dropped as the sport has grown, until now skiing

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN,

OBJECTIVE TO WIPE OUT LAW

WASHINGTON—The Roosevelt neutrality policy—one of the most important affecting this country during immediate crucial months—now has been worked out in conversations between the President and his State Department advisers and has two different objectives.

Objective No. 1 may be described as that for which the Administration will aim, but not actually expect to attain. This is the discretionary right of the Executive to impose embargoes on aggressor nations.

Objective No. 2 is the one on which the Administration will fall back, and the one it really expects to reach. This is the wiping out of the Neutrality Act except for the cash-and-carry provisions.

Put in different words, this would mean that any nation could buy war materials and munitions in the United States provided it came to American shores and loaded those munitions in its own ship. The effect of this is two-fold and extremely important:

One, it removes American vessels from the risk of being sunk for carrying contraband, thereby removing also the danger of war hysteria over such incidents.

Two, it plays into the hands of Europe's two chief democracies, France and Great Britain—for they dominate the shipping of the Atlantic. Thus in time of war they could buy munitions in the United States, while the dictator nations, for the most part, could not.

One handicap to this policy is that it also favors Japan, which because of its powerful fleet and merchant marine in the Pacific could always turn for its supplies to the United States in wartime. This is one reason why Administration leaders will aim for Objective No. 1, with discretionary power to the President to impose embargoes.

SENATOR PITTMAN

Senator Key Pittman, sagacious chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, is strong for this policy and has been taking soundings of various Senators. "Why shoot a man when you can starve him to death?" he says.

"The President feels," the Nevada Senator explained, "that we have economic and financial power to enforce our rights without resorting to force. He has made it clear that it is our duty to refrain from aiding these conquering dictators and equally our duty in every way except by armed force, to aid the democracies in their fight against these dictators."

To obtain Objective No. 1 Senator Pittman will begin holding extensive neutrality hearings before his Foreign Relations Committee, and he may obtain it. He expects that a consensus of Committee opinion will be reached in 30 days, when a report would be submitted to the Senate.

and what it requires are available to city clerks, women typists, college students, and so on.

This is no mollycoddle sport, either, but one that calls for health, skill and readiness to face cold weather and vigorous exercise.

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

Harry L. Hopkins is tackling plenty of difficulties in his new post as secretary of commerce. To begin with, his appointment had no more than been announced before it began to be hinted that he might find trouble in getting himself confirmed by the Senate. Regardless of the merits of these suggestions, they just go to show that President Roosevelt's selection of him for a cabinet berth by no means was unanimously popular. Moreover, it has been common talk that he had to have a cabinet portfolio in order to get him out of the WPA picture when congress starts investigating charges of improper politics in said WPA during his rulership of same. But supposing that some of such charges are substantiated? How will "Harry the Hop" be relieved of responsibility on the ground that he subsequently has been boosted into a higher position? It would seem to me that, the greater his current prominence, the more he will be embarrassed by flaws, if any, in his past record. I emphasize — "if any." I do not intimate that there ARE any. But if there are, I do not see how his promotion will help him.

Additionally, what does Hopkins know about commerce? Approximately as much as I do, I should guess.

I am quite familiar with his past. He is a native of my old home town—Sioux City, Iowa. He was too young for me to associate with, but I am acquainted with what our mutual home folks say concerning him. He is a temperamental welfare worker. In olden days he would have been the local postmaster. This was a worthy stunt. Far be it from me to belittle it. "Hoppy," as he was called out in "Sox City," glorified it—inflated it to national proportions.

All O. K.! I endorse every bit of it. But how does it make Harry a commercial expert?

EX-DANIEL C. ROPER Retiring Commerce Secretary Daniel C. Roper was not a commercial expert, either.

Theoretically he was a kind of a liaison officer between northern business and industry and agriculture and southern ditto. The truth is, he came up to Washington from South Carolina in 1892 and has been engaged ever since in nothing except politics, which he was good at. However, he never did learn the North—or the South, either, except from recollection and an occasional visit to his Carolina plantation. Essentially he always has been a Washingtonian—and, as a matter of business, purely a politician.

"Uncle Dan" is an exceedingly likable fellow. But as a secretary of Commerce? That is another matter. He never pretended to understand a thing about business. All the same, there was widespread personal regret in Washington at his departure.

Hopkins likewise is popular among the boys who have had intimate contacts with him. I have known him to pass up appointments of his own with the President in favor of newspapermen who were in a hurry. The journalistic gang swears by him. But, what the heck does he know about commerce?

HARRINGTON AND WILLIAMS The choice of Col. F. C. ("Pink") Harrington as Hopkins' WPA successor is well received on all hands.

As an army officer, conservatives accept him as something of a conservative; liberals accept him as a wonderfully liberal army officer. In the engineering handling of WPA projects there has not been a word of adverse criticism of him. That hap ought to feel complimented.

But CCC Administrator Aubrey Williams doesn't feel complimented.

He thought he was about to succeed Harry Hopkins as WPA head, amounting to a virtual cabinet post, the WPA directorship—due presently to become the department of public welfare. And is Williams sore!

It's an intra-New Deal row.

DIET AND HEALTH

Place of Hunger As Body Function

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

HUNGER is a friend when we are young, an enemy when we are middle aged and a stranger when we are old.

As a comptroller of food intake and body weight, it is no such accurate and delicate guide as thirst is for water intake. As we saw in discussing water intake, the slightest lowering of the fixed water in the tissues brings on thirst. When the deficit is made up, thirst ceases, and by chance we drink more water than we need, the excess is sluiced off by the skin or kidneys.

Hunger, or rather appetite, in relation to food intake has none of these virtues. It does not wait until food intake is needed, but begins to announce itself whenever the stomach is empty. The body may have enough stores laid up to furnish energy for a month, but the appetite will call for more. And, on the contrary, it is the testimony of those who have been on the verge of starvation that then there is no hunger sensation at all.

Not the Same

Hunger and appetite are not exactly the same in mechanism. Hunger is "a dull ache or gnawing pain referred to the lower midchest region, or pit of the stomach." Hunger occurs only when the stomach is empty and is caused by rhythmic contractions moving over the stomach. This has been proved innumerable times by physiologists. The experiment is performed by having a human subject swallow a small balloon. The balloon is blown up and its tube attached to a recording device. When the subject of the experiment indicates that he feels the sensation of hunger, the record shows that the stomach is squeezing the balloon by its contractions.

Appetite, on the other hand, is a complex experience, mostly psychic in origin and made up of memory impressions of sight, taste and smell.

Few Are Hungry

Few people living in our present civilization, at least in this country, are often hungry in the strict sense. When we say we are hungry we usually mean we have a good appetite. "Hunger may be satisfied while the appetite still calls. Who is still hungry when the tempting dessert is served?" writes the Harvard physiologist, Dr. Walter Cannon. "And yet, are there any who refuse it on the plea that they no longer need it? On the other hand, the appetite may be in abeyance while hunger is goading. What ravenous boy is critical of his food? Although the two sensations may thus exist separately, they nevertheless have the same function of leading to the intake of food."

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

On this definition it is appetite, not hunger, that is the villain I have described in the first paragraph. Appetite may be disordered either by being unnaturally diminished or by being excessive.

Lack of Appetite

Lack of appetite is a frequent symptom of some forms of dyspepsia. And the paradoxical thing is that these people who have no urge to eat and will not be persuaded are underweight and undernourished to an alarming extent. To all persuasions they say they will not eat because they have no appetite. To cure them they have to be convinced that an appetite is a luxury, not a necessity. You do not need an appetite to eat.

Excessive appetite is called bulimia. In a mild form most middle-aged people have it. They eat too much, more than their necessity, more than their activities call for. That is what I meant when I said that in middle age hunger is an enemy. It leads to overweight.

There is one exercise, recommended by Dr. W. W. Bauer, for overweight. It is to stretch your arms out straight before you—in order to push yourself away from the table, just before you have had enough to satisfy you.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

"Are you calling me a liar?"

READ THIS FIRST:

Elsie Ritter, a beauty shop operator, taking the place of a friend for a week in the private salon of Mrs. Horace Witherspoon, Sr., finds herself involved in a murder mystery when first the eccentric old lady and later her mid-aged daughter-in-law are found dead under the same hair drier. Elsie was attending each at the time, though out of the salon for a few moments before discovering the old lady's death. A string of criminals belonging to Mrs. Witherspoon, Sr., are strangely missing. Certain members of the Witherspoon family, and some of the house guests, strike Elsie as queer. Phil Benson, newspaper reporter and close friend of Elsie, arrives as the police launch their investigation. He immediately phones for Mac McIntyre, head of the Chicago homicide squad, who happens to be in town. Meanwhile Richard and Daphne Witherspoon, children of the second victim, conduct themselves oddly during questioning. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER TWENTY

CHIEF ELLIS grinned when Richard referred to him as a jackass. "Suppose," he suggested gently, "suppose you tell me what you know."

"Richard doesn't know a thing," Daphne cried. "He wasn't in the house this morning."

"Not? And where was he?" "I was in town," Richard informed him sagely, "and what I was doing is none of your business."

"Richard is excited," his sister put in quickly. "He was doing some errands for me—at the drug store!"

"That right, son?" "Yes," the boy admitted sullenly, "that's right."

"All right. We can check on that," Ellis waved him aside. "Now, Miss Witherspoon, you haven't told me where you went after leaving the salon."

"I went to Miss Westcott's room. I helped her pack."

"She is leaving on the evening train?" "Oh, no, she isn't!" Ellis contradicted her. "No one leaves this house until I give the word."

"But, officer!" Glad Westcott protested this order. She rolled her big eyes in his direction. "I've simply got to catch the evening train. My mother's expecting me."

"Sorry," he refused to be vamped. "No one can leave. Where were you this morning when you weren't packing?"

She pouted, reproachfully: "I was in bed, officer," she drawled. "I never get up before ten o'clock."

"Did anyone see you there?" "Why, officer?"

Chief Ellis' neck turned fiery red. "One up for Georgia," whispered Phil, and I giggled, but sickly.

"Quiet, please!" Ellis glared at us. "Now you, Miss—" he signaled

Della Craig. "What have you to say?"

The actress regarded him coldly. "Nothing whatsoever." She had evidently made up her mind not to forgive his earlier lapse.

"You were a friend of the deceased?" "Naturally."

"She invited you here?" "The family invited me."

"I see. You are Della Craig, the actress, are you not?" "I am."

"And where were you this morning?" "In my boudoir."

"So?" He regarded her suspiciously. "What were you doing there?"

"I was writing letters."

Della's glance would have frozen an Eskimo. "Quite?"

"All right." His eyes rested upon Toots Lemoine, and that young woman twisted and untwisted her jeweled fingers in her lap.

"Miss Lemoine?" He consulted a scrap of paper in his hand.

"That's me," affirmed Toots, and crossed her legs so that her silken shafts were revealed above her knees.

"You are a guest here?" "Yeah."

"A friend of the deceased?" "Not exactly." She cocked her head to one side and exploded her bombshell. "I'm engaged to Richard Witherspoon!"

"Not!" cried Daphne involuntarily. "No!"

"Say!" Toots forgot her role of lady and reverted to type. "Are you calling me a liar? Ask him! Ask your darling little brother! Go on, ask him!" She glared at Richard. The boy's eyes were glued to her face. Once at a street carnival I saw a snake the glazed eyes of which watched those of the Egyptian snake charmer who owned him as Richard's watched Toots. He was as if mesmerized; he bobbed his head jerkily at her command.

"It's true," he said, and he sounded as hopeless as a man can sound. "We're engaged."

"Oh, Dickie!" Beneath her rouge Glad Westcott paled. "How could you?"

"I'm sorry, Glad."

"Sorry, eh?" Toots said shrilly. "Sorry for what? You asked me to marry you, didn't you? Didn't you?"

"No wrangling, please." Ellis stepped in and took over the reins. "Did Mrs. Witherspoon approve of your engagement, Miss Lemoine?"

"She—she didn't know."

"Secret, eh?"

"No, it wasn't!" Toots denied quickly. "We just made up our minds this morning."

"While Richard was in town?" Ellis demanded shrewdly.

"Never you mind when! Toots was losing her temper."

"Well," he changed the subject, "maybe you can tell me where you were between eleven and eleven-fifteen this morning?"

"I was in bed," snapped Toots, and this time the chief let well enough alone.

It was Count Orsini's turn next. He answered promptly—too promptly, in my opinion—the questions put to him. He was, he explained smoothly, a guest in the house at the invitation of his fiancée, Miss Daphne Witherspoon. He had met Miss Daphne in Paris the winter before through mutual friends. Ellis got nothing from him save the fact that he had spent the morning in his room, and had been seen there as late as eleven o'clock by the maid who entered to change his bed.

"I'll get to the servants later," promised the chief, and then turned to Jeffrey Todington. "Are you also engaged to one of the ladies present?" he inquired sarcastically.

"I am not," Jeffrey's face flushed, and I guessed he was trying to remain cool and collected and refrain from punching the chief of police on the nose.

It turned out that Jeffrey was a house guest at the Manor at Mr. Richard's invitation. Mr. Richard and he were fraternity brothers and Jeffrey was a family friend of long standing. There was no mention of his relations or former relations with Daphne, but, then, I guess a man naturally does not boast of being jilted by the girl he loves. And Jeffrey was in love with Daphne. Any fool could tell that by the way he looked at her.

"And where did you spend the morning?"

"I was in the aboretum, and as far as I know no one saw me there."

"Communicating with nature, eh?" Ellis was losing his temper.

"That's my business!" Jeffrey's coolness threatened to rise to fever pitch.

"And mine," added the chief soberly. "Everything connected with this household is my business—now!" And at his words I had another shivering spell.

What secrets would this policeman unearth before he had finished with us? What skeletons would he drag forth from dark closets? I stole a quick glance about the room. Others, evidently, shared my fear and wonder.

THE WORLD WE DEAL WITH
“WE know that in much of the world trust in any form of agreement has completely vanished,” says Cordell Hull, Secretary of State. We know that might has stated it would have its way, and that it would recognize no equal except equal might. Such is the world we may have to deal with.”
The fact is only too apparent. It shouts at us from Germany, Italy, Japan and Spain. It is a world dominated by force. In spite of our religion, morality and science, we are back to the rule of the Middle Ages, “the simple plan that they may take who have the power, and they may keep who can.”

Nations that have higher ideals must strive to preserve them, in the faith that righteousness, peace and good will are normal facts, merely obscured for the present, and will yet prevail. But in the meantime such nations are obliged to arm and be ready to defend themselves, lest ruthless power set us all back for ages, as it has sometimes done before in human history.
And do we thereby put ourselves on the same level as the militarist nations? We do not think we do. We have no joy in war and no faith in force, as the militarists have. We try to keep our ideals and our sanity, deploring the need and waste of armament, and ready to push ahead in things worth while whenever the war-clouds lift.

VIGOROUS SPORT
SKIING has changed from a limited sphere and small following to a popular pastime. In the United States it has created new business and boosted other business long established. Hotels and railroads that used to close down or greatly curtail their services in the winter months now do their biggest trade then as they cater to throngs of skiers.

There are schools for beginners, where they are taught to balance and develop the muscles needed for this lively sport. The manufacture of skis and sticks is a thriving industry in itself. So, too, is the production of all the fancy ski togs now stylish for winter use even by non-skiers.
America invented indoor skiing, to the great benefit of backers, electrical firms, and others, but London has improved the idea with a great ski palace where international experts perform before delighted spectators.

Pleasantly enough, costs have dropped as the sport has grown, until now skiing

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

OBJECTIVE TO WIPE OUT LAW

WASHINGTON—The Roosevelt neutrality policy—one of the most important affecting this country during immediate crucial months—now has been worked out in conversations between the President and his State Department advisers and has two different objectives.

Objective No. 1 may be described as that for which the Administration will aim, but not actually expect to attain. This is the discretionary right of the Executive to impose embargoes on aggressor nations.

Objective No. 2 is the one on which the Administration will fall back, and the one it really expects to reach. This is the wiping out of the Neutrality Act except for the cash-and-carry provisions.

Put in different words, this would mean that any nation could buy war materials and munitions in the United States provided it came to American shores and loaded those munitions in its own ship. The effect of this is two-fold and extremely important:

One, it removes American vessels from the risk of being sunk for carrying contraband, thereby removing also the danger of war hysteria over such incidents.

Two, it plays into the hands of Europe's two chief democracies, France and Great Britain—for they dominate the shipping of the Atlantic. Thus in time of war they could buy munitions in the United States, while the dictator nations, for the most part, could not.

One handicap to this policy is that it also favors Japan, which because of its powerful fleet and merchant marine in the Pacific could always turn for its supplies to the United States in wartime. This is one reason why Administration leaders will aim for Objective No. 1, with discretionary power to the President to impose embargoes.

SENATOR PITTMAN

Senator Key Pittman, sagacious chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, is strong for this policy and has been taking soundings of various Senators. “Why shoot a man when you can starve him to death?” he says.

“The President feels,” the Nevada Senator explained, “that we have economic and financial power to enforce our rights without resorting to force. He has made it clear that it is our duty to refrain from aiding these conquering dictators and equally our duty in every way except by armed force, to aid the democracies in their fight against these dictators.”

To obtain Objective No. 1 Senator Pittman will begin holding extensive neutrality hearings before his Foreign Relations Committee, and he may obtain it. He expects that a consensus of Committee opinion will be reached in 30 days, when a report would be submitted to the Senate.

and what it requires are available to city clerks, women typists, college students, and so on.

This is no mollycoddle sport, either, but one that calls for health, skill and readiness to face cold weather and vigorous exercise.

DIET AND HEALTH

Place of Hunger As Body Function

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

HUNGER is a friend when we are young, an enemy when we are middle aged and a stranger when we are old.

As a comptroller of food intake and body weight, it is no such accurate and delicate guide as thirst is for water intake. As we saw in discussing water intake, the slightest lowering of the fixed water in the tissues brings on thirst. When the deficit is made up, thirst ceases, and if by chance we drink more water than we need, the excess is sluiced off by the skin or kidneys.

Hunger, or rather appetite, in relation to food intake has none of these virtues. It does not wait until food intake is needed, but begins to announce itself whenever the stomach is empty. The body may have enough stored up to furnish energy for a month, but the appetite will call for more. And, on the contrary, it is the testimony of those who have been on the verge of starvation that there is no hunger sensation at all.

Not the Same

Hunger and appetite are not exactly the same in mechanism. Hunger is “a dull ache or gnawing pain referred to the lower midchest region, or pit of the stomach.” Hunger occurs only when the stomach is empty and is caused by rhythmic contractions moving over the stomach. This has been proved innumerable times by physiologists. The experiment is performed by having a human subject swallow a small balloon. The balloon is blown up and its tube attached to a recording device. When the subject of the experiment indicates that he feels the sensation of hunger, the record shows that the stomach is squeezing the balloon by its contractions.

Appetite, on the other hand, is a complex experience, mostly psychic in origin and made up of memory impressions of sight, taste and smell.

Few Are Hungry

Few people living in our present civilization, at least in this country, are often hungry in the strict sense. When we say we are hungry we usually mean we have a good appetite. “Hunger may be satisfied while the appetite still calls. Who is still hungry when the tempting dessert is served?” writes the Harvard physiologist, Dr. Walter Cannon. “And yet, are there any who refuse it on the plea that they no longer need it? On the other hand, the appetite may be in abeyance while hunger is roasting. What ravenous boy is critical of his food? Although the two sensations may thus exist separately, they nevertheless have the same function of leading to the intake of food.”

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

On this definition it is appetite, not hunger, that is the villain I have described in the first paragraph. Appetite may be disordered either by being unnaturally diminished or by being excessive.

Lack of Appetite

Lack of appetite is a frequent symptom of some forms of despondency. And the paradoxical thing is that these people who have no urge to eat and will not be persuaded are underweight and undernourished to an alarming extent. To all persuasions they say they will not eat because they have no appetite. To cure them they have to be convinced that an appetite is a luxury, not a necessity. You do not need an appetite to eat.

Excessive appetite is called bulimia. In a mild form most middle-aged people have it. They eat too much, more than their necessity, more than their activities call for. That is what I meant when I said that in middle age hunger is an enemy. It leads to overweight.

There is one exercise, recommended by Dr. W. W. Bauer, for overweight. It is to stretch your arms out straight before you—in order to push yourself away from the table, just before you have had enough to satisfy you.

World At A Glance

Harry L. Hopkins is tackling plenty of difficulties in his new post as secretary of commerce. To begin with, his appointment had no more than been announced before it began to be hinted that he might find trouble in getting himself confirmed by the Senate. Regardless of the merits of these suggestions, they just go to show that President Roosevelt's selection of him for a cabinet berth by no means was unanimously popular. Moreover, it has been common talk that he had to get a cabinet portfolio in order to get him out of the WPA picture when congress starts investigating charges of improper politics in said WPA during his rulership of same. But supposing that some of such charges are substantiated? How will “Harry the Hop” be relieved of responsibility on the ground that he subsequently has been boosted into a higher position? It would seem to me that, the greater his current prominence, the more he will be embarrassed by flaws, if any, in his past record. I emphasize — “if any.” I do not intimate that there ARE any. But if there are, I do not see how his promotion will help him.

Additionally, what does Hopkins know about commerce? Approximately as much as I do, I should guess.

I am quite familiar with his past. He is a native of my old home town—Sioux City, Iowa. He was too young for me to associate with, but I am acquainted with what our mutual home folks say concerning him. He is a temperamental warfare worker. In olden days he would have been the local postmaster. This was a worthy stunt. Far be it from me to belittle it. “Hoppy,” as he was called out in “Sioux City,” glorified it — inflated it to national proportions.

All O. K.! I endorse every bit of it.

But how does it make Harry a commercial expert?

EX-DANIEL C. ROPER

Retiring Commerce Secretary Daniel C. Roper was not a commercial expert, either.

Theoretically he was a kind of a liaison officer between northern business and industry and agriculture and southern ditto. The truth is, he came up to Washington from South Carolina in 1892 and has been engaged ever since in nothing except politics, which he was good at. However, he never did learn the North—or the South, either, except from recollection and an occasional visit to his Carolina plantation. Essentially he always has been a Washingtonian—and, as a matter of business, purely a politician.

“Uncle Dan” is an exceedingly likable old fellow. But as a secretary of Commerce? That is another matter. He never pretended to understand a thing about business. All the same, there was widespread personal regret in Washington at his departure.

Hopkins likewise is popular among the boys who have had intimate contacts with him. I have known him to pass up appointments of his own with the President in favor of newspapermen who were in a hurry. The journalistic gang swears by him. But, what the heck does he know about commerce?

HARRINGTON AND WILLIAMS

The choice of Col. F. C. (“Pink”) Harrington as Hopkins' WPA successor is well received on all hands.

As an army officer, conservatives accept him as something of a conservative; liberals accept him as a wonderfully liberal army officer. In the engineering handling of WPA projects there has not been a word of adverse criticism of him. That hap ought to feel complimented.

But CCC Administrator Aubrey Williams doesn't feel complimented.

He thought he was about to succeed Harry Hopkins as WPA head, amounting to a virtual cabinet post, the WPA directorship—due presently to become the department of public welfare. And Williams sore!

It's an intra-New Deal row.

Wife's Part in Bricker's Success Dates to 1920

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9.—(INS)—An Ohio small town girl, proud of her heritage, stood in the background today and watched the man she knows more about than anyone else—good and bad—place his hand on a 100-year-old family Bible and swear to guide and protect the Buckeye state's 7,000,000-odd citizens to the best of his ability.

Before that moment she was Harriet Day Bricker, born and reared in Urbana and the wife of a country boy who made good as a lawyer in the city. After that moment, she was Ohio's "first lady."

Since John W. Bricker, a young lawyer just back from the wars in France, wooed and won her hand in 1920, Mrs. Bricker had remained in the background during her husband's political conquests. She believes women should stay in the political background because "men want it that way."

Not that Harriet Day Bricker hasn't tasted fire in the heat of a political campaign. During her husband's fight for election to the governorship, she was with him everywhere he went. Sometimes she even made informal speeches in his behalf at women's gatherings.

Devoted to Home

But, essentially, Mrs. Bricker is devoted to her home and adopted son, John Day Bricker, eight years old. She has repeatedly assured friends she wants to make a home of the executive mansion—except, of course, on those occasions of state where the home atmosphere would be out of place.

Next to her husband, her son and her home, Mrs. Bricker's hobby is collecting antique glassware and she is especially proud of her pieces of "Baltimore Pear" which she has obtained.

Mrs. Bricker is 41 years old, has brown eyes and long brown hair which she never allowed to be shorn during the "Bob craze." She is a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and finds time to keep in touch with the college days organization and in addition to:

PURINA FEEDS LOSE CAGE TILT IN TWO OVERTIMES

Purina Feeds, member of the City basketball league, lost a thrilling double overtime contest Saturday night to the Fountain Druggs of Columbus. The score of the game played in Williamsport was 27-26. A free throw tossed by Erlendbach in the second overtime broke up the ball game.

Two other games were played during the evening. Williamsport Merchants winning from an Ashville team, 36-34, and the Chillicothe City club taking a 36-32 margin over the Wallace bakery team.

Both contests were thrillers. The lineups:

BUCKEYES' WIN OVER HOOSIERS PROVES SURPRISE

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9 — (INS) — Somewhat surprised by a show of strength they did not know they had, Ohio State university's basketball players went back to the practice floor today in preparation for Saturday's Big Ten combat against Northwestern.

In defeating Indiana, 45 to 38, the Bucks not only snapped Indiana's seven game winning streak but caused speculation as to whether the tragic western barnstorming trip was all a mistake.

The work of Forward Jimmy Hull and Guard Dick Boughner, who scored 14 and points respectively, was especially cheering to Coach Harold Olsen as his men upset Indiana.

Although credit cannot be taken from the Buckeyes for their Indiana victory, there was not one of the 7,500 fans in the Fairgrounds Coliseum who did not feel that the Hoosiers played sloppy ball.

Constantly the visitors missed easy shots and their floor work and handling of the ball bordered on the ridiculous.

BUILD NEW BASE

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—Construction of the new $250,000 Coast Guard base on Inlet Harbor at this resort is underway. Workmen are creating the site by sinking about 1,350 feet of interlocking steel piling, which will be filled with sand dredged from the channel. Later a $37,800 boat-house and a $12,387 storage structure will be erected.

ARRIVAL OF MAX BAER IN COTNAM SPURS FIGHTERS

Developments Expected Soon

As West Coast Battler Angles For Title

NEW YORK, Jan. 9—(INS)—Max Baer, regarded by many observers as still the best heavyweight in the business aside from Champion Joe Louis, is expected to come barging over the horizon today to count himself in on an eventual shot at the title. Until such time as he formally declares himself, and accepts or rejects proposals leading toward a June fight with Louis, the situation stands approximately as follows:

Tommy Farr will make his fifth straight attempt next Friday night to win a fight in this country; Tony Galento still stands by his offer to meet Lou Nova on a winner-take-all basis; Maurice Strickland wants to meet Galento and, win, lose or draw, will donate his entire purse to the infantile paralysis drive; for a crack at Galento, Bob Pastor will donate half of his purse to the same charity.

As far as anybody knows the offers all are made in the best of

BUCKEYES' WIN OVER HOOSIERS PROVES SURPRISE

COLUMBUS, Jan. 9—(INS)—Somewhat surprised by a show of strength they did not know they had, Ohio State university's basketball players went back to the practice floor today in preparation for Saturday's Big Ten combat against Northwestern.

In defeating Indiana, 45 to 38, the Bucks not only snapped Indiana's seven game winning streak but caused speculation as to whether the tragic western barnstorming trip was all a mistake.

The work of Forward Jimmy Hull and Guard Dick Boughner, who scored 14 and points respectively, was especially cheering to Coach Harold Olsen as his men upset Indiana.

Although credit cannot be taken from the Buckeyes' for their Indiana victory, there was not one of the 7,500 fans in the Fairgrounds Coliseum who did not feel that the Hoosiers played sloppy ball.

Constantly the visitors missed easy shots and their floor work and handling of the ball bordered on the ridiculous.

Later a $7,800 boat-house and a $12,387 storage structure will be erected.

$13,636 CHECK TO AID SEWAGE PLANT PROJECT

Council Uninformed About Request For Delay In Starting Operation

ELIGIBLE LIST STUDIED

Papers Containing Grades Received By Civil Commission

Receipt of a second check in part payment of the government's P. W. A. allocation for the municipal disposal plant was announced Monday.

Miss Lillian Young, city auditor, said the second payment was $13,636.22. The first payment was $34,090.55. Total of the two checks is $47,726.77. The government allotted $61,363 for the plant. Payments are made as work progresses on the project.

Council recently passed an ordinance appropriating $1,641 from the general fund to the disposal plant fund to meet an order of the government for the second payment of the grant. The second payment was withheld until the city posted the amount, necessary to complete the project.

Delay Request Unanswered

To date, city officials have received no reply to the request made of P. W. A. for an extension of time for completion of the plant from Jan. 6 to May 1. The request was sent to P. W. A. after a request was made with council by the contractors William Loomis & Son, of Logan.

Harry L. Bartholomew, secretary of the Civil Service Commission, announced that graded papers of the persons who took examinations for the positions of chemist-superintendent and operators at the plant have been received from the state department of health.

A meeting of the commission consisting of Mr. Bartholomew, James Wickensimer and James McLaughlin, will be held Monday night to prepare an eligible list.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

For the first time in his professional career, Nelson Eddy followed in the footsteps of his father and grandfather by appearing with a military band in

"Sweethearts," the film current at the Cliftona theatre, with Jeanette MacDonald co-starred.

His father, William Darius Eddy, was bass drummer and later drum major with the First Regimental Band of the Rhode Island National Guard. Grandfather Eddy for fifty years was drummer with Reeves' American Band and played at Brown University's commencement progress during all that time. He later became drummer with his son's regimental band.

Nelson, who was band mascot as a small boy, used to be taken to camp at Fort Greble, and the chief annoyance of his youth was that the captain refused to return his salute. But Drum Major Hiram Florea of the United States Marine Band returned his salute when the Drum Major acted as technical adviser on a scene of "Sweethearts" in which Eddy sings with a marine band. The uniform the star was wearing was copied from the Major's.

AT THE CIRCLE

Benny Goodman is so superstitious about anyone picking up his clarinet and blowing it that, while working in Warner Bros. "Hollywood Hotel", he disjoined the instrument after playing it each time, and stuck the pieces in pockets. He wore a pongee shirt with special pockets for holding each piece. A further precaution taken by the famous band leader re his clarinet playing is using ice packs on his lips every night to keep them in perfect condition. "Hollywood Hotel" is the current feature at the New Circle Theatre, Co-stars are Dick Powell and Rosemary Lane.

THREE MILLIONS SLASHED FROM FUND MEASURE

Finance Chief Works With House, Senate Committees To Begin Economies

ASSEMBLY RECEIVES BILL

Huge Amount Removed From Appropriations For Salaries

COLUMBUS Jan. 9—(INS)—John W. Bricker began making good on campaign pledges of economy in state government today even before he took over the reins of the state government from Gov. Martin L. Davey.

While thousands poured into the capital to see Bricker sworn in at 2 p. m., it was announced that the new finance director, W. S. Evatt, and the House and Senate finance committees have slashed $3,000,000 from the temporary general appropriations bill prepared by the outgoing Davey administration.

The bill, to be introduced shortly after the legislature met for a brief session, covers expenditures of the first six months and is a stop-gap measure to tide over until the regular biennial appropriations bill is passed.

Other Regulations Written

In addition to the huge savings, other major economy provisions were written into the temporary bill. It provides that during the six months period not more than one-sixth of the amount appropriated for any one item may be spent in one month without consent of the board of control.

The bill specifically allocated $17,000,000 for old age pension payments instead of making a blanket appropriation of liquor profits for that purpose. Thus, Evatt stated, $680,000 more will be available for pension payments than under the plan of the Davey administration.

Other principal changes written into the appropriations measure by the Bricker administration included:

Salaries payable from general revenue fund reduced by $902,000. Appropriations for salaries in tax commission cut $110,000.

Highway department salaries item out $933,000.

Liquor department salaries allowance out $150,000. Appropriations for communication and travel cut about 25 per cent.

Items covering passenger automobiles omitted entirely, an exception being made for departments which must operate state trucks.

Dismissal Not Expected

Spokesmen said reduction of salary items was not expected to force a lower salary schedule for state employees, but will be absorbed through "dismissal of appointees of the outgoing administration who have been engaged in little more than political activity."

To finance an audit of various state departments, an item of $78,000 was added.
